COURSE DESCRIPTION

Examines principles of economics, budgeting, and finance as they apply to the sport industry.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

The student will be able to:

1. Apply principles of valuation through relevant accounting, economic, and finance theory
2. Interpret financial statements and perform basic ratio analysis
3. Understand how ownership and capital structure affect value
4. Analyze how well enterprises have identified and developed sources of revenue (media rights, tickets, sponsorships, etc.) and managed expenses
5. Understand how broad trends in facility design, financing, and operation have affected revenues
6. Analyze how enterprises have responded to changes in demand through pricing and branding strategies
7. Understand the role case law, the courts, league or organization management, and government policy affect sports operations
8. Assess risks involved in capital budgeting decisions, from talent acquisition and retention to facility construction and management

COURSE OVERVIEW

The learning experiences in this course are afforded through assignments, discussions inside and outside class, film and video material.

NATURE OF COURSE DELIVERY

The class will have lecture and discussion formats and will require active participation of all students.

STUDENT SUPPORT

Sports Business Journal (required)

Other readings as assigned.

ASSESSMENT

Two In-Class Short Presentations:	40%
Final Project Presentation and Paper:	40%
Class Participation:	20%

Two in-class presentations per student are given in which a valuation question is answered in a short presentation to the class, beginning October 9th. Topics are assigned by the professor. A student can volunteer for a third presentation, with only the highest of the two presentations counting for his or her final grade.

The final project is a comprehensive valuation of a sports-related enterprise (e.g., the SEC television network, the new women's professional soccer league, the new stadium for DC United) reflecting the techniques and concepts discussed throughout the semester. An oral presentation, followed by question and answers, will be conducted in the final class session. A written report (of 15-20 pages in length) is due two weeks later.
