Course Description

Education 672 explores the processes that influence the intellectual, social, emotional and physical development of middle and high school students. Within that context, the course further examines the processes and theories that provide a basis for understanding the learning process. Particular attention is given to constructivist theories and practices of learning, the role of symbolic competence as a mediator of learning, understanding, and knowing, and the facilitation of critical thinking and problem solving. Processes of developing and learning are considered as they impact the design of instruction and the selection of curriculum. The course also explores the relation of theories of learning to the construction of learning environments, student motivation, classroom management, assessment and how technology supports teaching and learning.

Course Methodology

The course is structured around readings, case analyses, reflections on those readings, conceptual analyses of developmental psychology and learning theories, expert group projects, a review of current research, and technology activities. EDUC 672 seeks to build clear bridges between theoretical/research perspectives and classroom practice. Student participation and involvement are crucial for making the course successful for everyone. The class will involve large and small group work, and individualized work on the online discussion link on Bb. The online discussions are to be considered a regular instructional time, and the assignments given are the equivalent of a full, in-class session.

Course Requirements

- 1. Classroom Participation and Attendance Policy: Due to the importance of classroom presentations and classroom discussion (including case studies) to your total learning experience, attendance and participation are important. Readings must be completed before class. Attendance and participation make up 10% of the grade. If you must miss a class, notify the instructor (preferably in advance), and you are still responsible for completing all assignments and readings for the next class. You are responsible for getting assignments in on time and catching up if you are absent. [Anyone missing more than two classes should see the instructor to discuss dropping the class.]
- 2. Written Assignments: All written assignments must be completed on a word processor. Assignments are to be turned in at the beginning of class on the date due. If you are absent, send your assignment to the instructor as a Word attachment. There is a 20% late penalty for late assignments, unless arrangements have been made, at the discretion of the instructor. In addition, all work submitted in this course must be your own or attributed to the proper author using the appropriate research reference format (APA). Refer to the GMU Honor Code for further information <http://oai.gmu.edu/honor-code/> ~~<http://oai.gmu.edu/honor-code>~~ . Students must use the writing style described in the Fifth Edition of the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association (APA) or a similar style manual or resources on OWL Purdue.
- 3. Oral Group Presentation: Students will be assigned to groups of no more than four students. Each group will select a chapter from the book, additional research and readings related to the topics in the chapter to present to the class. Research cited in the presentation should reflect data based research in adolescent development, The oral presentation includes both a description of a developmental theory that underlies the research cited and an interactive activity for the class that demonstrates application of the theory in classroom instruction. The presentation should last 20-40 minutes and should include use of power point to present information. The power point should be sent to the instructor at least a day prior to the class meeting so it can be posted on Bb. References for the presentation should be included on the last slide of the power point. (20 points)

4. Fieldwork Assignments: Fieldwork Assignment #1 – Analysis of educational theory seen in teen-based movie

Choose any one of these “teenage flicks:” The Breakfast Club, Stand and Deliver, Dead Poet’s Society, Dangerous Minds, To Sir with Love, Mr. Holland’s Opus, 10 Things I Hate about You, Coach Carter, Finding Forrester, Napoleon Dynamite, Secret Life of Bees, Freedom Writers or Hunger Games. Feel free to explore and find a movie that might be relevant. If you choose a different movie, please check with the instructor before you use it to complete this assignment. After watching the film, please analyze the adolescent behavior, cliques, characteristics, and interactions in a five-page (double-spaced) paper. Apply psychological developmental theory to the analysis by looking for five characteristics of adolescents that are mentioned in the textbook. In the paper briefly describe the characteristic and then explain how circumstances in the movie illustrate the theory. Use direct and indirect quotations from the movie, with appropriate citations for the text and movie. (10 Points)

Fieldwork Assignment #2 – Independent Analysis of Case Study

Students will be assigned two case studies to analyze. The analysis will explore adolescent levels of development (e.g.—physical, social, or moral), adolescent motivation, and classroom strategies. In the case analysis you need to demonstrate understanding of the intersection of learning theory with instruction. You also need to explore multiple perspectives on problems students experience in school. You will want to examine the case study information to problem solve potential strategies for supporting adolescent engagement in the learning process, and application of classroom learning in the students' lives outside of school. Explore how special needs, interrupted educational experiences, language, racial, gender, ethnic or religious differences may impact student involvement and learning. The analysis of the two case studies assigned should be at least five pages in length (total). (10 points)

Fieldwork Assignment #3- Interview an Adolescent

Interview an adolescent about how motivation affects his/her learning and behavior. That is, what motivates this student to succeed? Also, interview a teacher about motivational techniques that work in the classroom. The student and teacher do NOT need to be in the same classroom. The interview and analysis should result in a paper that defines motivation, a connection between information gained from the interview with the definition of motivation, and a description of the nature of motivation, behavioral, humanistic, social/cognitive and cognitive development. Students need to present teaching strategies that support positive motivation and engagement in classroom instruction, with a connection to theory and research discussed in class in a paper at least five pages in length. References should be cited from the textbook and other research discussed in class. (10 points)

5. Application Project (PBA)

Students will create a case study of a typical adolescent that may be encountered in a general education classroom. Students will describe the physical, social/emotional and cognitive/language development of the adolescent. Strategies for determining adolescent motivation, prior knowledge and values and goals of the adolescent will be described. Strategies for meeting the needs of the case study adolescent within a classroom will be described. Authentic assessment strategies that measure transfer of classroom learning to the adolescent's out-of-school learning will be described. All strategies will be supported by at least two research references for each set of strategies (six references total) and the textbook, in APA format. (30 points)

6. Bb assignments

Students will participate in two Bb discussions (out-of-class) that will involve summarizing a peer-reviewed, data-based research article related to adolescent literacy development, risk-taking behavior, homelessness, career awareness, adolescent pregnancy, and/or self-destructive behaviors such as self-mutilation or gang-involvement. Students will explore, on Bb, suggested strategies for becoming aware of issues adolescents may be facing and how to relate to adolescents in a classroom setting. All students will read the discussion board posts and be prepared to discuss in class. Make sure to include the full reference in APA format for the article on Bb. (10 points)

NOTE: Maintain copies of all projects to document progress through the Secondary Education Program. Projects may become part of your professional portfolio, and useful when you have your own classroom.
