COURSE ASSIGNMENTS AND EXAMINATIONS

Course Structure:

Students should come to class prepared to actively participate in class discussion and activities. Class activities will include lecture, small group work, experiential exercises, and videos. Students are expected to attend both classes, to come on time and to stay for the entire class. A lunch break and bathroom breaks will be incorporated during class time. Students who miss all or part of one class will not be able to pass the course.

Course Assignments/Requirements:

- Active Participation is expected in all class activities. Students are expected to attend all classes and come to class prepared having completed all reading and written assignments. Students (3 to 4 in a group) will prepare a handout (1-3 pages) that will include a summary of the focus or issues of the group you are targeting, a treatment plan or guidance lesson, and resources and references to share with the class. - Final Course Reflection paper (4 page maximum). This paper should be 3-4 pages (use APA style) and include what you have learned about eating disorders and yourself from the class and how it may affect you in your role (treatment, advocacy, prevention) as a school or community agency counselor. Plagiarism

Plagiarism is a violation of both the George Mason University code of honor and the expected professional dispositions of the Counseling & Development Program. The GMU English Department has developed the following statement regarding plagiarism: "Plagiarism means using the exact words, opinion, or factual information from another person without giving that person credit. Writers give credit through the use of accepted documentation styles, such as parenthetical citation, footnotes, or end notes; a simple listing of books and articles is not sufficient. Plagiarism is the equivalent of intellectual robbery and cannot be tolerated in an academic setting. Student writers are often confused as to what should be cited. Some think that only direct quotations need to be credited. While direct quotations do need citations, so do paraphrases and summaries of opinions or factual information formerly unknown to the writers or which the writers did not discover themselves. Exceptions to this include factual information which can be obtained from a variety of sources, the writer's own insights or findings from their own field research, and what has been termed common knowledge. What constitutes common knowledge can sometimes be precarious, and what is common knowledge for one audience may be so for another. In such situations, it is helpful to keep the reader in mind and to think of citations as being reader friendly. In other words, writers provide a citation for any piece of information that they think their readers might want to investigate further. Not only is this attitude considerate of readers and establishes credibility, it will almost certainly ensure that writers will never be guilty of plagiarism.”
