University Catalog Course Description

Advanced study of selected topics in education for students who have been admitted to the Counseling and Development program

Course Overview

This elective course will focus on the development of advanced level skills and competencies in the practice of family counseling/therapy. Family-systems based models for practice in a complex, multi-cultural society will be explored and both current and emerging contexts for associated clinical practice will be studied.

The course will include consideration of historic approaches to family counseling/therapy as well as more recent approaches and also will include review of video examples and opportunities for applied practice and case consultation. The course will include a “laboratory” session on Saturday March 31.

Course Delivery Method

This course will be delivered using lecture, workshop, and lab formats.

Learner Outcomes or Objectives

Upon completion of this course, student will be able to:

1. Consider the “context” of family in relation to family structure, function, roles and responsibilities and in relation to the need for counselors/therapists to demonstrate “cultural competence.”
2. Compare and contrast major theoretical models in systems-based marital and family counseling/therapy.
3. Enhance their skills in applying a variety of approaches for and techniques of marital and family counseling/therapy.

Confidentiality

In order to provide a safe learning environment for students in the class, and to protect the confidentiality of “practice clients” (including class members), students will maintain confidentiality and discuss case material and others’ personal information, reactions, etc. ONLY while in class or privately with other current class members.

Professional Standards

This course is a “special topics” course and meets the requirement that all master’s students in the Counseling and Development academic program take 2 credits of special topics course work. This 1-credit course will contribute to counseling and development graduate students’ knowledge of a particular population of clients who are challenged by a specific set of issues.

This course fulfills the following requirements:

1. Virginia Department of Education requirement for school counseling licensure that candidates understand the knowledge, skills and processes of individual and family counseling.
2. Virginia Department of Health Professions requirement that Licensed Professional Counselor candidates complete graduate study in theories and techniques of counseling and psychotherapy.
3. Council for the Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP) core requirement described in Section II.K.e: Helping relationships: An understanding of counseling and consultation processes.
4. American Counseling Association Code of Ethics requirement that counselors establish counselor education and training programs that integrate academic study and supervised practice.

Course Performance Evaluation

Students are expected to submit all assignments on time in the manner outlined by the instructor (e.g., Blackboard, Tk20, hard copy). The performance-based assessment for this course is the PAPER that is due on April 9.

- Assignments and Examinations

Summary of Grading System and Course Requirements --

- Class Participation (15% of Course Grade)

- As this course is BOTH didactic AND experiential, it is essential and required that students attend AND participate actively in each class session
- Students are obligated, as part of the class participation requirement, to post AT LEAST ONE comment after each class session during the period of the course and participate activity in an On-Line Dialog that will be hosted as part of the Blackboard Site for this course
- It is expected that students will read all assigned readings and reference encouraged and supplemental readings.

- Case Study & Presentation (35% of Course Grade)

- Students, in small groups (to be assigned), shall prepare a case study, preferably based on a “real” family situation they know about or a case that they have been involved with professionally.
- The case should be related to a significant marital and/or family issue and reflect BOTH a conceptualization/formulation of the issue from a family systems perspective AND provide examples of interventions that have (or could) be used to assist and support the couple or family.
- The case should be presented as a brief written review or powerpoint presentation. It MUST include audio or video material illustrative of the application of counseling skills from a systems perspective either with an actual client system OR with a group (preferably other students in the class) who can simulate the client system.

- This project is due on March 31 at the Saturday Lab Session and will be a part of a series of presentations that will be part of the day's program.
- The written document(s) (paper and/or powerpoint-type presentation) and associated audio/video materials must be turned in at the conclusion of the Saturday March 31 class session. The document(s) must include your perspective on the formulation of the issue/challenge presented, a critique of your intervention(s) and a description of the impact of this therapeutic encounter on the client system.
- Paper -- DUE ON April 9 at the Last Class Session (50% of Course Grade)
 - Prepare a paper of no more than 10 pages in length that provides a review of a central issue, theory or method in the family counseling/therapy field. You should review the relevant historical literature and recent research, provide a thorough discussion of the selected issue and suggest directions for future study and/or research. In addition, as part of your paper, describe a fictional or actual "case study" of how the chosen model can be applied within the context of a family system focused intervention.
- Other Requirements

COURSE EXPECTATIONS

APA Format: Students in Counseling & Development courses are expected to use APA style (6th ed.) for written papers.

Cell phones, pagers, and other communicative devices are not allowed in this class, unless specific class activities include internet-based activities. Please keep them stowed away and out of sight. Engaging in activities not related to the course (e.g. gaming, email, chat, text, etc.) is prohibited and will result in a significant deduction in your participation grade. Notify the instructor prior to class if you have an emergency situation that requires accommodation.

Plagiarism

Plagiarism is a violation of both the George Mason University code of honor and the expected professional dispositions of the Counseling & Development Program. The GMU English Department has developed the following statement regarding plagiarism: "Plagiarism means using the exact words, opinion, or factual information from another person without giving that person credit. Writers give credit through the use of accepted documentation styles, such as parenthetical citation, footnotes, or end notes; a simple listing of books and articles is not sufficient. Plagiarism is the equivalent of intellectual robbery and cannot be tolerated in an academic setting. Student writers are often confused as to what should be cited. Some think that only direct quotations need to be credited. While direct quotations do need citations, so do paraphrases and summaries of opinions or factual information formerly unknown to the writers or which the writers did not discover themselves. Exceptions to this include factual information which can be obtained from a variety of sources, the writer's own insights or findings from their own field research, and what has been termed common knowledge. What constitutes common knowledge can sometimes be precarious, and what is common knowledge for one audience may be so for another. In such situations, it is helpful to keep the reader in mind and to think of citations as being reader friendly. In other words, writers provide a citation for any piece of information that they think their readers might want to investigate further. Not only is this attitude considerate of readers and establishes credibility, it will almost certainly ensure that writers will never be guilty of plagiarism."
