University Catalog Course Description

Focuses on emerging or foundational concepts in school psychology research, theory, or practice under direction of faculty member.

Course Overview

This course covers lifespan development (prenatal to death) in three main domains: cognitive, physical, and social/emotional. Cultural variations, contextual influences, and personal experiences are examined as interrelated factors to development. A significant portion of this course focuses on the timeframe of birth to young adulthood. By exploring human development in the context of the schools, school psychology students will broaden their understanding of how the educational environment impacts development. Additionally, their understanding of human development will enhance their professional skills, fostering K-12 students' academic achievement, positive growth and development, and mental health.

Course Delivery Method

This course will be delivered using a lecture/discussion format and Blackboard.

Learner Outcomes or Objectives

This course is designed to enable students to do the following:

1. Discuss the stages of human development across the cognitive, physical, and social/emotional domains.
2. Examine and explain the impact and interrelatedness of cultural, contextual, and personal experiences on development.
3. Demonstrate knowledge of contemporary theories of human development and their relevance to educational practices in early childhood, middle, and adolescent education.
4. Understand and apply knowledge of human development in order to enhance school systems' policies and procedures, as well as K-12 students' academic achievement, cognitive growth and development, and mental and behavioral health and wellbeing.

Quizzes = 50 pts (10 pts each)

Students will complete five quizzes (10 points each) across the semester to demonstrate knowledge of central aspects of human development and developmental theories. Quizzes may include a combination of multiple-choice responses, short essays, and other test items.

Article share = 10 pts

You will be responsible for presenting and leading the discussion for one article during class time. When you are not the presenter, you will be responsible for participating and engaging in a discussion with the presenter and your group.

Presenter's Responsibilities (6 points)

A week before the presentation, the presenter will upload to Blackboard the article they will discuss with their group and a two-page discussion handout they will use to facilitate the discussion of their article's relevance and findings. The discussion handout should contain a brief summary of the article and its findings (one page) and 5-7 questions for discussion. This is worth 5 points. There will be a discussion thread for posting articles and discussion sheets on our class's Blackboard site.

Following your small group presentation, presenters will submit a paragraph reflecting on their presentation experience (i.e., How well did the discussion go overall? What insights or thoughts did participants share during the discussion of the article?). This is worth 1 point. Upload to Bb by the end of class or 11:59 pm that day.

Participant's Responsibilities (4 points)

As a participant, you will be responsible for reading the article and discussion sheet ahead of time, and thoughtfully listening to and engaging in article shares. To demonstrate engagement each participant will write a brief reflection (two paragraphs) following the article presentation, sharing thoughts about the research findings and relevance to readings and experience. There are 4 occasions where you will be a participant, worth 1 point each. Upload to Bb by end of class or 11:59 pm that day.

Research paper = 30 points

Students will complete a 6 to 8-page research paper (not including title page and references) on a topic of development related to the practice of school psychology. Paper will be in APA format, double spaced, with regular font and margins. Additional details will be provided throughout the course.

Class participation = 10 points

Students are expected to contribute to class discussion. Outside of the article shares, students will complete small group activities and share-outs, a short writing activity (one or two paragraphs) in response to a prompt, etc. There are 9 in class activities; one is worth 2 points, the rest are worth 1 point. If a written response is required, it should be uploaded to the "class activity (date of class)" slot on Bb by the end of class.

Grading

(Please note: A course grade less than B- requires that you retake the course. A grade of "F" does not meet requirements of the Graduate School of Education. Students must maintain a minimum GPA of 3.0 [B average] to remain in good academic standing.)

- A+ = 99-100
- A = 93-98
- A- = 90-92
- B+ = 87-89
- B = 83-86
- B- = 80-82

A Statement to Frame Our Work Together:

In an ideal world, science would be objective.

However, much of science is subjective and is historically built on a small subset of privileged voices. In this class, we will make an effort to use data from a diverse group of scientists reporting on diverse populations, but limits still exist on this front.

I acknowledge that it is possible that there may be both overt and covert biases in the material due to the lens with which it was written, even though the material is primarily of a scientific nature. Integrating a diverse set of experiences is important for a more comprehensive understanding of science.

Despite the potentially exclusionary nature, of some content included in this course, I have chosen to include such research because I believe that the data still has value in informing and supporting our discussions and may push us to reflect on our own understanding of human development and how we do our work on a daily basis. Therefore, within this class we will critically assess the studies and theoretical frameworks presented and collaboratively assess their applicability to our work as scientists.
