University Catalog Course Description

This course examines the processes by which social, cultural, and linguistic variables influence human behavior. It focuses on differences within and between cultural groups related to students' learning and achievement in educational settings.

Course Delivery Method

This course will be delivered using a seminar format. The course is technology-enhanced using Blackboard. Students are responsible for any information posted on the course site. The Blackboard site for the class can be accessed at: <http://blackboard.gmu.edu>.

Learner Outcomes or Objectives

This course is designed to enable students to:

- demonstrate understanding (in writing, class discussion and presentations) of major concepts of learning, instruction and motivation as sociocultural processes
- discuss research on how individual and cultural factors form the underpinnings of individual differences in behaviors, beliefs, and attitudes
- use theories and research to analyze whether and how learning and instructional environments and practices address learners' socio-cultural and linguistic differences

- discuss the role of parents, peers, and school on learning in school and out of school
- consider the effects of race, ethnicity, SES, and culture on students' learning in a variety of settings
- Develop and reinforce their critical thinking, oral, and writing skills.

Course Performance Evaluation

It is expected that each student will:

1. Read all assigned materials for the course
2. Attend each class session
3. Participate in classroom activities that reflect critical reading of materials
4. Critique and/or discuss assigned articles in class
5. Lead class discussion where appropriate
6. Respond to weekly journal prompts
7. Participate in their group organization profile project actively and responsibly
8. Participate in a panel presentation and turn in accompanying materials

Students are expected to submit all assignments on time in the manner outlined by the instructor. Information on assignments are posted on Blackboard, but changes to details and deadlines for assignments may be made during class sessions and students are responsible for this information.

- Assignments and/or Examinations (Additional details and deadlines will be provided in class and/or on Blackboard).

Journals and their use in class discussion (30%)

To facilitate deeper thinking on the class material and class discussion, students are expected to keep a public Blackboard journal in which they write their thoughts. Some weeks will have a specific journal assignment; others should involve reflecting on the week's readings in a way that makes sense to the writer. If no specific journal prompt is assigned for a given week, you should assign one to yourself to make sense of course readings and ideas. Journals will be graded at the end of the semester. A portion of the grade will be that the journals were consistently and thoughtfully kept in a timely way. Ten or more entries is considered a complete set of journals so you can opt to skip some week's entries to suit your schedule/interest—though you should still complete the readings. Journal entries should include ideas across all the week's required readings, not just one. (Supplemental readings are not required).

Three journal entries will be formally graded for quality at the end of the semester—2 the student selects, 1 the professor randomly selects. The evaluation criteria will be for depth of thinking and insights about the reading. It is fine for entries to read more like musings and notes than a succinct polished paper, but it should connect to specific content in the reading and cite relevant sources.

Excellent journal examples will meaningfully analyze readings, connect them to broader course themes and to your own scholarly interests.

Students should look at others' journals as well and bring up and comment on ideas therein. If you're confused by a reading, do not consider it cheating to look at what other students had to say about it to help shape your ideas. If you do use an idea from another student's journal, cite it. Students will be expected to bring up ideas generated through the journaling process in class discussions.

Organization Profile and Presentation (30%)

Teams of students (minimum 2 per group) are required to prepare a detailed profile of a non-profit organization that devotes itself to improving some aspect of learning (broadly conceptualized) in schools or informal settings. The profile will be an overview of the organization and an explanation of the apparent theory of action espoused or demonstrated by the organization. Connections to ideas from class sessions and readings should be made from the perspective of the researcher team—including suggestions for improvements or extensions of their practice. All sources of evidence for this material should be included in an appendix (e.g., on-line materials, interviews, field observation notes). We will begin planning this assignment early in the semester, giving each group time to develop their profile, which will be presented mid-way through the semester. Students will also be asked to reflect on team dynamics. (See rubric at end of syllabus)

Individual Presentation & Associated Materials (30%)

This assignment mirrors an academic conference style-presentation.

Possible approaches:

1. Reviewing and contextualizing a book-length study that has contributed to our understanding of sociocultural processes in learning, instruction, and motivation. Must include 1 scholarly book or monograph that has been approved by professor and 2-3 empirical articles from peer-reviewed sources in the past three years that cite the book.
2. Applying key constructs in sociocultural processes to your own research interests. Some sample constructs would be: communities of practice, situated learning, learning environments, ecological systems, sociotechnical systems, distributed cognition, or cultural models. Must include more than 10 research article sources.
3. An alternate idea aligned with your goals (e.g., report for an organization, research proposal) that investigates sociocultural perspectives. Must be approved in advance by professor.

Requirements: a) 1-paragraph proposal of planned presentation topic, b) 10-minute presentation, c) uploaded presentation slides done in APA style, d) 1-page synopsis of presentation and a list of references in APA style to be provided to class, e) final paper (5-8 page range).

• Other Requirements

Attendance and Participation (10%)

Because of the importance of classroom discussions to students' total learning experience, each student is expected to come to class on time and participate in class discussions and activities. Additionally, assigned readings and journal entries are to be completed before class in order to support discussion. Attendance, punctuality, preparation, and active contribution to small and large group activities are essential. These elements of behavior reflect the professional attitude implied in the course goals and will account for 10% of the course grade. In the event students miss a class, the professor should be notified, preferably in advance, and the student is responsible for arranging with a classmate for any assignments and materials discussed that day. (See rubric for attendance and participation in Appendix A).

• Grading

The requirements for this class will be weighted in the following manner:

Attendance and Participation	10%
Journal	30%
Organization Profile	30%
Panel presentation and materials	30%

Your final grade for this class will be based on the following:

A+ = 98 – 100%	A = 93 – 97.99%	A- = 90 – 92.99%
B+ = 88 – 89.99%	B = 83 – 87.99%	B- = 80 – 82.99%
C = 70 – 79.99%	F < 70%

Attendance & Participation Rubric (10%)

Student participation is imperative to student learning and a successful class. The following rubric outlines how student participation scores will be determined in this course. All students are expected to demonstrate specific characteristics and actions throughout the semester. The quality and quantity of these actions will determine the points assigned for participation.

Students are expected to:

1. Be punctual, present and well prepared for class.
2. Participate fully in class activities and assignments – take an active part in small and large group discussions (without dominating the conversations) and pay attention to class lectures.
3. Make insightful comments, which are informed by required readings and demonstrate reflection on those readings. Specifically, students should come to class with questions, comments, and thoughts on the current readings.
4. Treat class activities, group discussions, and class discussions as important components of the course, showing respect for fellow classmates and the course material.

Each of these criteria will be assessed on a 5-point scale.

- 5 = Student consistently demonstrated the criterion throughout the semester.
- 4 = Student frequently demonstrated the criterion throughout the semester.
- 3 = Student intermittently demonstrated the criterion throughout the semester.
- 2 = Student rarely demonstrated the criterion throughout the semester.
- 1 = Student did not demonstrate the criterion throughout the semester.
