PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

CURRENT POSITION:

August 2010 – Present

Dean and Professor (with tenure)
College of Education and Human Development
George Mason University
Fairfax, VA

The College of Education and Human Development (CEHD), with more than 135 full-time instructional faculty and nearly 4,500 students across 30 academic programs and 10 research centers, provides leadership in the transformation of schools, organizations, and communities. External research support for CEHD has exceeded $17M in an academic year. The college is composed of three sub-units: the School of Education, School of Kinesiology and School of Sport, Recreation and Tourism Management. The college offers degree programs at the undergraduate, master's, and doctoral levels. CEHD's academic programs are accredited by the Council for the Preparation of Educator Preparation, the Commission on Accreditation of Athletic Training Education, the National Strength and Conditioning Association and the Council on Accreditation of Parks, Recreation, Tourism and Related Profession. All educator licensure programs have been approved by the Virginia Department of Education.

George Mason University, classified as a Carnegie "very high" (R1) research university, is the largest public university in Virginia with more than 38,000 students. Recently identified by U.S. News and World Report as one of the top "up and coming" universities in the United States, the university is an innovative, entrepreneurial institution with global distinction in a range of academic fields, including education and human development. The University is a leading exemplar of the modern, public university.
